Office of the President

Spring, 2003

Dear Graduates:

I and the entire John Jay College community congratulate you and salute you upon your graduation. We have been privileged to witness your hard work and dedication throughout this challenging period in our country's history. You began this journey with hopeful minds. Today, you personify a spirit of determination and optimism. Along with your family and friends, we look to you with great pride and admiration.

We are confident that you will go forth with the same diligence you displayed during your time at John Jay, whether you continue your education or pursue your career. You take the College's mission with you as you enter your chosen fields and confront the difficult issues of the day. The College will always be a network of support that you may utilize as an Alumnus. Please remain a member of the John Jay community through our website and by participating in College events. The Alumni Association will provide you access to a wide array of resources at John Jay. The advancement of the College is possible through you and your accomplishments. In the end, you are John Jay College.

To each of you, congratulations and good luck!

Sincerely,

Gerald W. Lynch

Dear Year 2003 Graduate

In May, you can expect that one or more of the Commencement speeches will address the meaning of "commencement" as the end of one experience and the idea of a "new beginning." At that time, you will celebrate the completion of your degree after years of hard work. You may also reflect on the events of the last two years and how differently you must now prepare for the future.

"New beginnings" are exciting to contemplate, but we could never anticipate the world situation you face in the future. Professional careers can no longer be planned in peaceful isolation. There is new danger beyond city and national borders that threatens international security. In the past, I spoke to graduates about taking leadership roles in political and justice systems. John Jay College's successful job fairs prove that private, local, state and federal agencies aggressively compete for well-trained, John Jay College candidates. I urged graduates to seek the most challenging, responsible positions knowing that we put ourselves in your hands because you are the promise of the future. But that sound career advice no longer seems sufficient. This country and the world face grave danger. We must have new visions, new voices to find viable solutions.

For the past two years, according to an October 5, 2002 International Herald Tribune article, a diverse group of United Nations experts has explored how education and training may be used to counter the enormous global stockpile of weapons of mass destruction. One premise is that current disarmament and nonproliferation education must teach how to think, rather than what to think, about peace and security issues. I challenge the Class of 2003 to investigate these new ideas to for combating intolerance and violence bred by ignorance and the absence of critical thinking skills. We must have visionaries who can foster a global idea of "education for peace." The United Nations experts propose scholarships for graduate training in the non-proliferation field, internships at international organizations with responsibilities in the disarmament and nonproliferation sphere, and organizations can develop and disseminate multilingual, on-line educational materials for high school and undergraduate students. You are the newest cadre of well-trained John Jay College graduates who will staff the agencies that may provide the global solutions of the future. I hope you will make this disarmament initiative part of your vision.

With congratulations, we celebrate your accomplishments, we put ourselves in your hands, confident that you will meet the security and leadership demands of the future. The Division of Student Development extends its sincere best wishes for your professional and personal success in the years to come.

Sincerely yours,

Message for 2003 Yearbook
Lawrence Kobilinsky Ph.D.
Associate Provost

You, the graduates of the class of 2003, are now members of a select group of individuals--the thousands of distinguished John Jay College alumni who have embarked upon professional careers dedicated to public service and related areas such as security, fire science, forensic science, etc. It is likely that the police officer who patrols your neighborhood, the fireman in your local fire station, and the government official or attorney who listens to your concerns all share a common John Jay experience with you.

Over the past few years, you have been enriched by growth in your intellectual, creative and social capacities and skills. You have developed professional competence and confidence in yourself. Not only have you benefited for your years of learning at John Jay, but your family and community have benefited as well.

Now as you proceed in your individual careers, you shall exemplify the excellent learning and training acquired at John Jay College. When nervous incoming freshmen question their own abilities, we will point to you. The faculty and administration of John Jay are proud of you and your accomplishments.

The world is waiting for you and what you have to offer. It is up to you to make your contribution to society and to make a better, more secure and just world - and you will. John Jay College salutes you, certain of your future contributions to our society and success in all of your endeavors.

Dear Graduates

June, 2003

It is with great pleasure that I congratulate the class of "2003". You have worked very hard to earn your degree at John Jay College and your dedication has paid off. You accomplished this because you set goals and made a commitment to see them through. This is indeed a proud achievement.

The challenges facing the criminal justice system today are enormous. I am confident your degree will help you deal with these complex issues and find solutions to improve our society. The education and knowledge you have acquired at John Jay College will provide you with some of the tools to do that.

I extend to each of you my best wishes in all your future endeavors. Well done!

Sincerely,

Robert M. Pignatello

Dear Graduates

It is my great pleasure to extend congratulations to the graduating class of 2003. You will soon have your diplomas showing that you have received baccalaureate or masters' degrees, and you have every right to be proud of your self. It didn't come easy, each and every one of you worked extremely hard to reach the "finishing line."

But if we have done our job right at John Jay, you will not be finishing at all. Rather, you will be embarking on a lifelong quest of learning. Whether you are continuing your formal education in pursuit of an additional degree or you are settling into a career path, I hope and trust that you will constantly be educating yourself on the issues that confront you. Not only does this entail forming judgements and making decisions based on the best available information you can get, but it means applying the skills of critical thinking to the many choices in life which come your way. Socrates said it well: the unexamined life is not worth living.

Reflection and open-mindedness are especially important as you continue fulfilling your role as citizens. The city, state, country, and indeed the world desperately need each and every one of us to be active participants in the political process, democracy is just a meaningless word unless we all get involved. I therefore fervently urge you to use the knowledge and the insight you gained at John Jay to participate in political life so we can create a society that is safer, fairer, and more humane.

Celebrate your accomplishments, plan for the exciting future that awaits you, and always remember John Jay College. I wish you the best of luck in all the years ahead.

Sincerely,

James P. Levine

Dear Graduate:

I am proud to offer you my sincerest congratulations as you receive your degree from John Jay College of Criminal Justice.

The pursuit of higher education is a winding and sometimes tortured path. You, no doubt, have worked, full-time or part-time, on your way to this degree. In addition, you may have family responsibilities which distracted you from your studies. Yet, you have succeeded where some others have faltered. Congratulations!

As you think about the future, I ask you to consider education as a never ending endeavor where you as an individual continue to grow and evolve. Look forward to new and different educational experiences. If you are receiving a baccalaureate degree consider enrolling in a master's degree. If you are receiving a master's degree consider enrolling in a doctoral program.

John Jay College of Criminal Justice is very proud of you and we are confident that you will represent the College well in all that you do in the future.

Good luck!

Sincerely,

Richard Saulnier, Ph.D.

May 2003

Dear Graduates:

As you celebrate your graduation, you also mark a major milestone in your life. I ask you to reflect on your years at John Jay College; moreover, I urge you to recall the passion and desire that motivated you to enter the criminal justice field. That passion should carry over into the next phase of your life. Your journey has just begun.

Today's leaders are entrusted with the power to make decisions that can dramatically change our lives. As a potential future leader, your mental, physical and spiritual stamina will likely be challenged by escalating local, regional and world dangers. I trust that your experience at John Jay College has equipped you with the knowledge and skill to chart a safe and effective course. It is my hope that you will continue to grow and embrace the concept of life-long learning to build upon this milestone and gain the wisdom to serve your constituents with competence, dignity, and integrity.

I ask you to make a personal oath to uphold the values of your community and seek justice in your chosen profession. You are the future leaders, and we trust you will make us proud by your impeccable actions on our behalf. I am reminded of the following:

"No man is wise enough nor good enough to be trusted with unlimited power."

Dear Graduate:

We are ecstatic to congratulate you on the successful completion of your course of study. This marks a significant journey in your life and we are sure that this is only the beginning. We urge you to maintain the motivation which made graduation possible, into your everyday lives. Life is a continuous learning process that never stops, yet only slows down to allow you to absorb and use the things you've learned. Leverage all that you have learned thus far to propel you toward all of your dreams and goals.

We wish you the best in your personal growth and success.
